

Korrekturhinweise

Vegetable box delivery

0	1	2	3	4	5	6
D	B	E	A	D	E	C

Begründungen

0

Text D (South West: Rod and Ben's) says: "Delivery: Exeter, Exmouth and Plymouth £1.00. Elsewhere by mail order at £4.99." Rod and Ben's therefore charges approximately £5 for delivery to more distant areas.

1

Text B (North West: Abel and Cole) says: "Bananas are fairtrade." Abel and Cole therefore helps producers in other countries to get a good price for their fruit.

2

Text E (South East: The Ethical Food Company) says: "Delivered in a wooden crate, which protects food well and can be returned with the next order." The Ethical Food Company therefore has the strongest packaging.

3

Text A (London: Farmaround) says: "Minimum order of £12.25 and delivery at £1.00." Farmaround therefore does not deliver below a certain order value.

4

Text D (South West: Rod and Ben's) says: "Delivered in good condition in a sealed cardboard box with many items individually packaged." Rod and Ben's therefore tightly closes their packaging material.

5

Text E (South East: The Ethical Food Company) says: "Organic and non-organic produce packaged separately but all bags biodegradable." The Ethical Food Company therefore puts all things that were grown with chemicals in a different container.

6

Text C (North East: Goosemoor Organics) says: "No excess packaging, with only the farm's own delicious chillies separately wrapped but with useful explanation label as to suggested uses and strength." Goosemoor Organics therefore packs their home-grown product individually.