An Austrian Facebook friend just told me about his school — a technical college for ‘materials engineering’ or something like that. He told me that a lot of Austrian teenagers attend such technical colleges. I don’t get it! How can anybody do such a specialized training in upper secondary school? At 14 you don’t really know what you want to do later. And companies are looking for people with a broader education these days. Seems like a complete waste of time to me.
